Dedication

Behind every great enterprise are people—the people who make it great. Behind those people is a leader, a man who has caught a glimpse of the future and is able to instill in others his own fiery enthusiasm for the company he represents. Such a man is Major General Clements McMullen, and the company—Kelly Air Force Base and the United States Air Force. His genuine love for aircraft and the people who fly and maintain them has revitalized the oldest depot in the USAF. Kelly AFB today holds two titles: The oldest and the newest air depot in the world! It is old to many USAF pioneers who remember when wood and canvas biplanes thundered off the dusty field. It is new to everyone who looks to Kelly for the latest techniques in aircraft overhaul and maintenance, whether those techniques be in human relations or mechanization.

This book, then, is dedicated to the people of Kelly and the man who helped them write "The Kelly Way" into the Air Force language, Major General Clements McMullen!

MAJOR GENERAL CLEMENTS McMULLEN * * BIOGRAPHY

A brilliant Air Force career, both as a pilot and as an administrator, has brought General McMullen to command of the San Antonio Air Materiel Area, with beadquarters at Kelly Air Force Base. His military career dates back to 1917 and is marked by his advance through the ranks from private to Major General.

February 1892, General McMullen studied civil engineering at Washington & Lee University, in Lexington, Viginia From 1912 to 1917 he was a practicing engineer in Florida. When the United States declared warm Germany in 1917, Clements McMullen enlisted in the Army and was sent to the Georgia Institute of Technology for technical training as an air cadet. From there, he was sent to Kelly Field, newly opened on the outskirts of San Antonio, Texas, for flight training. He was commissioned a Second Lieutenant, pilot, in the Aviation Section of the Signal Reserve Corps on 6 March 1918.

He was appointed First Lieutenant 20 October 1920.

His next promotion came to him on 1 September 1931. Shortly after, he took over as chief of the Power Plant Branch at Wright Field. While in power plant work, he was instrumental in getting turbo-superchargers and fuel injection into actual operations in the Air Corps. After a nine-months course in the Air Corps Tactical School at Maxwell Field, Alabama, he was graduated in 1934 and stayed on as post engineering officer. The next March, he went to Langley Field, Virginia, as assistant to the operations and training officer of the General Headquarters Air Force. A month later, he was promoted to Major, and soon after, became the G-3 of the old GHQ Air Force.

In 1937 McMullen was chosen to attend the Command and General Staff School at Fort Leavenworth, Kansa Graduated in June 1938, he returned to Texas chief engineering officer of the San Antonio Air Depot at Duncan Field. World War II was now close at hand: the Air Corps was expanding, and promotions came faster. Raised to Lieutenant Colonel in December 1940, McMullen became a full Colonel in February 1942, a month after he .ook command of the 3rd Air Service Area, with headquarters in Tampa, Florida.

Six months later he was advanced to Brigadier General and assigned to Air Service Command head-quarters, first in Washington and then at Patterson Field, Ohio, as chief of the Maintenance Division. In April 1943, he was given the rank of Major General, which he now holds. From September 1944 until after the war's end, he was Commanding General of the Far Eastern Air Service Command, moving up through the Pacific with Douglas MacArthur from New Guinea to Tokyo. In December 1945, he became chief of staff of the Pacific Air Command.

When the Eighth Air Force was reactivated at Fort Worth, Texas, in November 1946, General McMullen was its commander. Appointed two months later as Deputy Commanding General of the Strategic Air Command, charged with the duty of dispatching the atom bomb to any point on earth in the event of war, he held this vital defense post until October 1948, when he returned once more to Kelly Air Force Base, as Commanding General of the San Antonio Air Materiel Area.

Still an expert and active pilot, General McMullen flies his own plane when he travels. He is rated by the Air Force as a Command Pilot, and as a Combat Observer and a Technical Observer besides. He has flown almost every type of aircraft from fighters to heavy bombers, including the mammoth XC-99—the biggest plane in operation anywhere—which is based at Kelly. General McMullen is one of the nation's top authorities on military supply and aircraft maintenance.

Among his decorations are the Distinguished Service Medal with oakleaf cluster, the Air Medal, the Commendation Philippine Liberation with bronze star, the Pacific Theatre Ribbon with three battle stars, the American Defense Ribbon and Medal, the European Theatre Ribbon, the Japanese Occupation Ribbon, and the World War I and World War II Victory Ribbons.

General McMullen is a member of the Order of Daedalians, composed of pilots who flew with the United States air arm in the first World War, and of the Institute of Aeronautical Sciences.

History * * * Kelly Air Force Base

when the oldest permanent air base in the United States was opened back in 1917, the Air Force still was a minor branch of the Army Known as the Aviation Section of the Signal Corps, at the been organized ten years earlier, in 1907, and was intended principally for observation. In 1909 the Army had bought its first plane from the Wright Brothers, and Wilbur Wright had taught three officers to fly—among them Henry H. Hap Arnold, who was to become the first communder of the independent Air Force. The First Aero States of the independent Air Force and 77 enlisted men had been activated in San Diego in 1913. Four years later when the United States declared war on Germany and the Field was established, the Army had 55 planes, 131 against officers (of whom 78 were pilots), and 1,087 enlisted

Because of the obvious natural advantages of Texas for experiments with flight, the Army had centered its flying program in San Antonio at the largest post in this area, Fort Sam Houston. There the earliest Army pilots had taken off and landed on the broad parade ground that was named for the father of General Douglas MacArthur. But when the nation went to war April 6, 1917, it was already obvious that air combat was to play a big part in the fighting on the Western Front, and plans were under way for a vast expansion of the Army's pilot training program. Facilities were clearly inadequate at Fort Sam for flight development on such a scale. So in May the Army acquired a tract of land seven miles southwest of San Antonio and transferred all its flying activities to Kelly Field.

The Field was named for an Army pilot, Lieutenant George E. M. Kelly, who had died in a crash at Fort Sam Houston six years earlier. A native of London, England, Kelly had come to the United States in 1896, when he was eighteen years old, to join two of his uncles in Great Falls, Montana. He had become a citizen in 1902, and in 1904 had enlisted in the Army. Three years later he was commissioned as an Infantry officer. After service in the Philippines and leave in China and England, Kelly had been stationed in San Francisco when he became interested in aviation during an aerial exhibition in Michigan, where he made a balloon ascent as an observer.

Transferred to San Diego in February 1911, Kelly took flight instruction under Glenn H. Curtiss. Three months later,

Kelly Scenes of Yesterday

Curtis biplane at Fort sam Houston when a brace from one of the wheels to a front elevator collapsed. The plane bounced the wheels to a front elevator collapsed. The plane bounced the camp of the Eleventh Infantry. To avoid plowing into the camp, Lieutenant Kelly banked sharply and dove into the ground. He was the first Army pilot to be tilled in a crackup. His body is buried in the National Cemetery on East Commerce Street in San Antonio.

At the same time that pilot training activities were transferred to Kelly Field, the aviation supply depot was removed from Fort Sam to a warehouse at 1903 South Flores Street, not far from the base. In December of the same year (1917) the depot moved into a newly-completed warehouse at the Field. Kelly was then divided into two adjoining fields. Military pilots were trained at Kelly Field No. 2, while Kelly Field No. 1 converted pilots into flight instructors. The two fields together attained a peak of 31,000 people during World war 1. Most of them were military personnel, living in a tent city while they learned to fly.

By the end of the War, in November 1918, Kelly No. 2 turned out 1,459 military pilots. Another 298 pilots had been graduated as flight instructors at Kelly No. 1. They were the 17,540 flying cadets taught by the Army during the War. The Air Service of the Signal Corps (as it was after May 1918) on Armistice Day in France had 740 planes assigned to 45 squadrons. They were manned by 767 to 181 observers, and 23 gunners. Nearly all the pilots had received their early flight instruction at Kelly Field.

For a short time after the War Kelly Field was almost closed. On 1 July 1919 it had a complement of only five officers and 40 enlisted men. At that time it was designated a combat station. Here it was that the old 1st Surveillance Group, composed of the famous 8th, 90th and 112th Aero Squadrons was first organized. Later in 1919 the 1st Pursuit Group and the Second Day Bombardment Group were organized here. These units were the nucleus of today's mighty combat Air Force. Kelly No. 1 was designated Duncan Field for Major Thomas Duncan, who had been killed in a crash at Bolling Field near Washington two years before. Since 1921 the aviation supply depot had been consolidated with the aviation repair depot, which had moved to San Antonio from Dallas. They took over Duncan Field and became (in 1927) the San Antonio Air Depot, taking care of all air supply and maintenance activities in the Southwest.

In 1926 the Army's Air Service became the Army Air Corps. Kelly Field was designated an advanced Flying School in 1921. The 1st Pursuit Group was moved to Selfridge Field and the Second Day Bombardment Group was moved to Langley Field. The 1st Surveillance Group moved back to Kelly from El Paso in 1921 and was re-designated the 3rd Attack Group. This unit continued to operate from Kelly until 1926 when it was moved to Galveston and later to Barksdale Field. Primary flying during this period was carried on at Brooks and March Fields until Randolph Field was opened in 1932. Between July 1922 and the end of 1940, when advanced flight training also was moved to Randolph, 3,945 pilots were graduated at Kelly Field.

Meanwhile, Duncan Field also was growing. In 1936 at Duncan the 3rd Transport Squadron was activated to ferry freight and personnel. It was an element of the 10th Transport Group at Wright Field in Dayton, Ohio—the organization from which the far-flung Military Air Transport Service evolved. In 1939, on the eve of World War II, Duncan Field's civilian-worker strength was 1,100 men, in addition to a handful of military personnel. It had 161,640 square feet of storage space in four permanent buildings (the engineering shops, two Flight Test hangars, and the Quartermaster installations) and in thirteen temporary wooden shops and warehouses for maintenance and supply.

The War gave tremendous impetus to Duncan's expansion. In September 1941 the engineering department hired ten women for its instrument section. They were the first female technical workers ever employed at the Field. By December, on the day of Pearl Harbor, Duncan had 5,000 civilian employes and 1,275 enlisted men. Six months later the civilian working force had grown to 21,000, there were more than 5,000 enlisted men, and the Field was bursting at its seams.

Placing Wreath on Grave of Lt. George E. M. Kelly During Ceremonies of 35th Anniversary of the Base

It was no longer possible for Duncan to perform its essential function—which was to keep aloft the airplanes which the Army flew—unless it found more room. So on January 7, 1943 the last of Kelly's flight-training schools departed, Duncan took over both bases, and the consolidated depot resumed its original name, Kelly Field.

At its wartime peak, in 1945, Kelly Field had about 24,000 civilian workers—nearly 10,000 of them women—and approximately 6,000 enlisted men and officers. Its shops repaired and modified thousands of airplanes of all types, from training craft to transports, from Flying Fortresses to fighters. Its engineering facilities established a rate of overhaul on accessories such as bombsights, guns, and electrical equipment that set a record for repair agencies of any sort, military or commercial. Its engine reconditioning plant turned out an average of 1,400 aircraft engines a month. Through its huge warehouses moved mountainous tons of supplies for the fighting squadrons of an air arm scattered over the earth. Its training units taught many thousands of recruits how to take care of aircraft in the field.

On September 18, 1947, two years after the War's end, the Army Air Forces—as they had been known since 1941—at last achieved their freedom as the United States Air Force, on an equal status with the Army and the Navy. Kelly Field was then rechristened Kelly Air Force Base. Its personnel had been cut back to about 12,000 civilian workers and 3,000 enlisted men and officers. Now that the fighting was over, its activities had of course diminished. But it had become an immense military installation—the largest industry of any kind in the Southwest, and the biggest air depot in the world. During the Berlin Airlift its engine shop rehabilitated 500 power plants a month for Operation Vittles alone, overhauling 10,000 a year for the various Air Force groups stationed in all the far corners of the world.

Since 1949 Kelly AFB has been an important element in the Bi-Zonal System under which the Air Materiel Command discharges its responsibility for supply and maintenance in the Air Force. The system divides the earth into two regions, roughly east and west of the Mississippi River. Each of the eight major air depots in this country—of which Kelly AFB is one—is responsible for the maintenance of certain types of aircraft on its own side of the line. Thus Kelly furnishes parts and makes repairs on B-36 bombers and B-50 superforts operating from Shreveport, Louisiana, to Japan or Guam.

In addition, Kelly has worldwide responsibility for supply and overhaul of various kinds of property. The 36 classes that come under this head include engines of certain types, bearings, and all the spark plugs used in the Air Force. Altogether they amount to more than 300,000 individual items. Moreover, Kelly is the headquarters of the San Antonio Air Materiel Area, which covers the states of Arizona, New Mexico, most of Texas, and Louisiana. In this area Kelly is the central storehouse for 106 property classes, dispensing them to local Air Force bases such as Carswell, in Fort Worth, and taking care of their maintenance requirements.

Finally, Kelly is the home of several tenant organizations.

Of these, by far the biggest is the Continental Division headquarters of the Military Air Transport Service, which flies military personnel and freight to the Armed Forces in all parts of the world, and ferries the wounded back from the war zones. Another tenant is the 62nd Troop Carrier Group. Still another is the Office of the Inspector General of the Air Force. All together, they account for most of the 1,500 or more officers and enlisted men stationed at Kelly at the end of 1950. Over 13,000 civilian employes in its shops and warehouses constituted the bulk of its personnel. As the situation in the Far East grew worse and the Air Force expanded to meet the threat of World War III, Kelly's working force increased at a rate of about 1,000 men and women a month.

A far cry from the little air depot of 1917 is Kelly AFB today. The single warehouse has grown into a vast aggregation of storage facilities numbering 107 in all, with more than 6,000,000 square feet of space. The property contained in those buildings amounts to better than 250,000 tons, worth well over a billion dollars. The cost of the plant alone—excluding machinery—was about 200,000,000. Its value at today's prices is a good many times that amount. The field has eight miles of concrete runways 150 feet wide. Its hangar and machine-shop space comes to 1,250,000 square feet.

The base covers an area of 3,426 acres, or 5 1/3 square miles. Besides the original Kelly Field of 1917 it includes a smaller facility adjacent to it, once known as Camp Normoyle. A Quartermaster-Ordnance depot, it was merged with Kelly in the consolidation of 1943. The distance around the perimeter of the entire base is 23 miles. In a year Kelly distributes and receives some 3,250,000 separate items of supply weighing 450,000 tons. Many of these parts are made or overhauled in its own shops. No other enterprise in this area, either military or industrial, approaches Kelly AFB in size or financial importance.

Two suburban additions are maintained exclusively for Kelly personnel—officers, airmen, and civilians. One, on the base, is a Government-owned project known as Kelly Homes, with 200 housing units. The other is Billy Mitchell Village, a commercial venture adjoining the base. Its 1,000 units are under Air Force supervision. Together these two installations house about 5,000 people, making Kelly a sizeable town in itself, as well as a military and industrial site. The base has its own post-office address: Kelly Air Force Base, Texas.

The oldest air base in the nation is no longer the sole center for aircraft supply and maintenance. As the Air Force has grown in power and complexity over the years, other huge depots have sprung up across the country: McClellan AFB in Sacramento, Tinker in Oklahoma City, Brookley in Mobile, Robins in Georgia and others. But Kelly AFB remains the largest. Even though the need for air materiel has forced its training activities to move elsewhere, Kelly is a historic monument with many associations for oldtime pilots of the Air Force. It has never had the glamor of a cadet training school such as Randolph, on the other side of the city. Yet Kelly trained the men who built the Air Force—and now it supplies the planes and parts that keep their successors flying.

Mechanical aids speed transport of heavy materiel into proper channels.

Conveyors handle routine chores, keep things moving and out of the way.

Conveyors extend right into cargo carriers.

Kelly Air Force Base is the world's largest Air Force Supply Depot.

Figures which tell the story of its efficient use of mechanical handling equipment—plus men are these:

- ★ 5,250,000 square feet of covered storage is utilized.
- ★ 7,332,000 square feet of open storage is also utilized.
- * Kelly stocks 487,834 different items.
- * There are 4,600 employees involved in the supply operation.
- * Annual payroll is slightly less than $15,000,000 per year for those employees.
- ★ Total expenditure of funds for supplies was $79,323,762 during last year.
- ★ Kelly handles approximately 5,161,534 items per year.
- * Total tonnage handled per year is approximately 661,014 tons.

It has been proven with Kelly's mechanization program that 34 per cent less employees are needed to accomplish a workload that has increased 16 per cent more in tonnage and nine per cent in items processed. Due to mechanization, the average time required to ship an item has been reduced from six to two days.

Emphasis is placed on procuring the proper equipment for the required job. When practical, standard equipment is used. The traveloader is used constantly in the handling of heavier and bulkier items in outside storage. The mobilift operates successfully in confined areas.

The one item that has contributed the most to Kelly's mechanization is the overhead conveyor system. Used in all three areas of Kelly, it is considered the longest overhead conveyor system of this type in the world. It covers 12,792 feet and greatly facilitates the movement of property from the receiving area into the storage area when property is received and from the storage area to the packing area when the materiel is shipped. Locally designed and fabricated drawbridges are used to span double railroad tracks in two places along the route. The drawbridges are necessary to permit the switching of railroad cars to load and unload.

Traveling at a rate of 100 feet per minute, the overhead conveyors speed along, picking up warehouse dollies every 20 feet which are attached or removed as the work requires. Heavy duty and shelve type dollies are used on this line in order that all size and weight materiel may be moved.

A veritable network of dead roller conveyors cover 20,720 feet in supply operation buildings. To increase the value of the dead roller conveyors 1,800 feet of powered belt conveyors are also used for boosters and for moving materiel over long distances. Transportable conveyors are also used to help out with certain types of work.

Conveyors have been used to simplify the loading and unloading of trucks. Energized conveyors combined with 40 foot crash trucks have proved a valuable side in transporting supplies. Conveyors were installed in the Receiving Areas which could be adjusted to the height of the truck. Unloading a truck became a simple procedure of using an electric motor to activate the conveyor which removes the load. Loading a truck, it it used in reverse in the same manner.

Locally fabricated semi-powered conveyors are used for loading and unloading aircraft. Drums can be unloaded and stacked at a height of twelve rows at a rate of 780 per hour with the locally designed and fabricated drum stacker. The chain can be reversed for unstacking and loading into box cars.

The transfer of paper work is highly important to the smooth functioning of the supply operation. Since the standard Baldwin Paper Carrier was generally unsuccessful, it became necessary to design a suitable type carrier locally. The overhead paper conveyor produced is unique in its operation and has proved most satisfactory for the job. It is composed of a bicycle type chain mounted with metal extensions. To each metal extension a swivel hook is attached. The metal extensions vary in length in accordance with the number of drop stations desired. When paper work is attached to the swivel hook on the appropriate extension bar, it travels to its proper drop station and the standard clamp type clip releases.

Extensive packing operations increases the importance of the manufacture of boxes and other packing materiel. The installation of a nailing machine in each of the packing areas for the sole purpose of nailing lids on wooden boxes, has saved the government an estimated $26,000 a year. The modification of a cutoff saw has also contributed greatly to the box factory operation.

Special bins have been made which enhance the storage operation. Storage of pipe and angle iron is no longer a problem. Oxygen cylinders are stored securely and efficiently.

Because the turnover of military stock is erratic, warehouse handling has been a mean problem for supply men. Packaging for items which must remain stored for years and suddenly be ready for use upon requisitioning is one of the worse. Long-lasting packaging which keeps an item always prepared has been found by using a gaseous corrosion inhibitor. Opening, processing, regular inspection and repackaging are eliminated thus cutting the maintenance cost.

Supervising the mammoth job is the directorate of supply and services, Brigadier General Thetus C. Odom, who directs the activities of the service's mail-order house.

Big and urgent is the production of supply at Kelly Air Force Base.

Approximately 13,000 feet of conveyor system ties six main warehouses together facilitating handling of materiels.

HISTORY DIRECTORATE, ENGINEERINGMAINTENANCE

It has been said that a knowledge of historical backgrounds is essential to the proper interpretation of present progress. Let's pause a moment and think back to the old days of Duncan Field in the "Twenties and Thirties." A few buildings and a handful of men. That's where the largest part of the present Directorate, Maintenance-Engineering is now located. Growth was accomplished by slow changes rather than by drastic upheavals.

Today, the Maintenace-Directorate is housed in 113 buildings with over 2,300,000 square feet of working space and employs about 15,000 workers. Acres of ground outside of buildings are utilized as outdoor shops for projects that are too big to be moved into buildings.

As of old, production records are set almost daily to be broken again and again into processing hundreds of thousands of the various items ranging from the smallest radio crystal to the "Silver Giants" of our Air Force.

As in any big industry, the Directors, Maintenance-Enginering has an organizational set up to take advantage of knowledge and experience to insure maximum functions and to develop initiative within each component. The Directorate itself is composed of the Director, three Assistants, eight Divisions and one Plans, Operations and Administrative Office. Each of the Divisions in turn are divided into several Branches, and then into Sections. The chief virtues of a shop organization of this type are, simplicity, clear-cut lines of authority, responsibility and the effectiveness with which smooth flow of production may be maintained. Each and every organizational component works independently, yet in perfect unison to support the production programs of the Directorate.

To illustrate the variety and vastness of Maintenance operations, the following are some daily production figures picked at random. These figures can be used as a good average of any one day's routine activity in Maintenance shops.

Our Engine Branch is responsible for the overhaul of all types of aircraft power plants. This includes any power plant from a Piper Cub to a B-36 that is rated at 3500 H.P. Each Section of the Branch performs some phase of engine overhaul. A normal working day consists of 15 power plant units completed, this includes testing and canning, both man-size jobs in itself. (Canning is an Air Force term meaning put in a metal container for better handling and better corrosion control.) Two compelte power plants transmissions, 130 magnetos, 35 carburetors, 260 cylinders chrome plated, 400 cylinders reconditioned, three cooling fans for R-4360 power plants and 70 power plants prepared for storage. These figures do not represent any record breaking days of production of which the Branch has many.

The Equipment Branch's primary responsibility is to keep the vehicles in condition for use over the SAAMA area. Apart from this, the Branch overhauls and repairs items ranging from the tiniest hand tool to giant-like generators and compressors. The latest type fire-crash trucks, huge refueling trailers, automotive powered materiel handling equipment, and all accessories such as batteries, carburetors, fuel pumps, engines and tires are repaired here.

Another phase accomplished by the Equipment Branch is the overhaul of hangar equipment. This includes such varied items as cooling and heating equipment, power plants, runway lighting systems. In addition the operation of the Base P M shops where all type vehicles and powered materiel handling equipment are driven for minor repairs, battery changes, lights, motor tune-ups is conducted.

An average day's output includes 31 vehicles repaired, 14 fork lifts, four tugs, four refueling trucks and the handling of 51 minor repair jobs. Other items such as dollies, fire trucks, tractors, oxygen trailers number 14 completed, in one day. Accessories completed include engines, fuel transmission pumps, 262 hand tools such as electric and pneumatic tools, jacks, tool boxes and similar small items.

Another Branch, the Accessories Branch, is responsible for the overhaul, repair or modification of all types of flight, engine and navigation instruments, both electrical and mechanical, automatic pilot compasses, synchromous instruments, and similar gages, indicators and transmitters. The Branch also overhauls such items as actuators, generators, starters, inverters, and governors. A complete mechanical spark plug reconditioning section within the Branch, one of the best in the Air Force averages 19,000 spark plugs daily.

Another responsibility of the Accessories Branch is the repair of parachutes, flight clothing, life rafts, rubber gasoline tanks and aircraft tires of all types. In the Branch's modern propeller shops, propellers ranging from the smallest wooden props to the giant B-36 propellers are overhauled, repaired and modified to latest Air Force specifications.

Produced during an average working day are the following: 510 various types of instruments, 489 electrical items, 23 propellers, 56 parachutes. Reconditioned are 29 flying jackets, 20 bag assemblies and innumerable types of test and calibrating equipment used within the Directorate.

The Electronic Branch's mission is to overhaul, repair, and modify electronic devices such as radar and radio transmitters, receivers, radio sets, amplifiers and similar items. An average daily production is as follows: Radio Communication items total 120, Radar items, 76, Radio Ground and Mobile Units, 2, Radio Compasses, 15; Radio

The Manufacture and Repair Branch is exactly what its name implies. This Branch supports the other Branches, in manufacturing items that are not procurable or not in stock. The Branch also has a Maintenance Services Section where the maintenance of machines, shop equipment, air compressors, and general utilities are handled.

This Branch also operates a complete wood manufacturing and repair shop where various items made of wood are turned out. The Sheet Metal Section is equipped to manufacture complete aircraft wing assemblies if needed. The repair of such items as ailerons, flaps, rudders, elevators, wings, cock-pit enclosures sometimes require the manufacture and replacement of several sections, yet the Section averages over 20 of the above mentioned items daily.

Also manufactured are such items as kunckle pins, rotors, screw jacks, containers for crystals, aircraft and helicopter blades. A daily average of 8,900 items are manufactured. To date, the Machine Shop boasts that there is no item that cannot be duplicated or manufactured in their shops.

A Plating Shop is also operating by this Branch, where over 2,000,000 items were plated last year. Items ranging from washers to crankshafts were plated with silver, gold, chrome, nickle, copper, lead or brass plating.

The largest Branch in the Maintenance-Directorate is the Aircraft Branch. Activities in this Branch are so diversified that it can easily be stated that an aircraft can be built within their shops. From the basic blueprints, flight test, overhaul, repair and modification combined actually comprises the duties of this Branch.

Another task of the Aircraft Branch is aircraft storage. Hundreds of aircraft, ranging from trainers to bombers are stored and maintained. A complete service facility for refuel and minor repair of aircraft are also operated. Aircraft from all over the world drop in for this service, be it refueling or replacement of some minor part and adjustment. Refueling alone averages over 58,000 gallons of aircraft gasoline daily.

The XC-99, world's largest cargo plane is being housed and serviced by this Branch. Of course the primary mission at the present time is the modification of B-36 bombers. This tremendous project is progressing so rapidly that over 2,600 man-hours have been saved from the original estimate on each aircraft.

One of the record breaking feats performed by the Aircraft Branch's personnel is recorded in the Historical Annals of the Air Force. This was the speed in which many of the B-36's damaged by a tornado that struck Fort Worth in September 1953 were put back in commission. Hundreds of employees of this Directorate made the treck from Kelly to Convair in planes, cars, trains, trailer and trucks to set up outdoor shops and restore the "Silver Giants" in less than 30 working days. The men practically slept on the job and in the true "Kelly Spirit" completed their portion of the job prior to the scheduled dates of completion.

In addition to the routine production, all the Branches worked on numerous special projects. For example, one of the sections in the Electrical Branch ages radio tubes, a process performed by only a limited number of the largest tube manufacturers, who send their representatives to Kelly AFB to gather data and learn the techniques of our tube aging process. Our progressive assembly line for overhauling aircraft engines has also been observed by representatives of many of the largest automobile manufacturers.

Amongst the many "firsts" accomplished by Kelly AFB was performed by our Technicians in the Aircraft Branch. This was when the first B-26 medium bomber was equipped with complete thermoanti-icing systems. This system was designed, parts manufactured and installed in the aircraft Branch shops. It features many safety devices and experts consider it to be "fool-proof."

An outstanding feat was the check and test of 1,500 anti-exposure suits performed by the Rubber Section of the Accessories Branch in a record breaking time of 80 hours.

Time and space does not permit to list all of the outstanding accomplishments achieved by the Directorate. However, one fact should be added and that is that numerous pieces of test, and special equipment, special tools, fixtures, jigs, etc., were designed and manufactured by the Directorate technicians with one thought in mind, to speed up the production and cut the production cost.

Many new techniques in overhauling the varied items of the Air Force were devised within the Directorate, of which many has been adopted by private industries.

Each of the Branches has its own Control Section, which sets up the Master Repair Schedules, controls the flow of materiels and performs other tasks necessary to insure the smooth flow of production. Each Branch also has its own Inspection Service, where items repaired by the various Branches are inspected for quality and workmanship. Each Branch has its own Administrative office, headed by a Chief of the Branch, whose duty is to formulate the respective Branch productive policies.

The Plans, Operations and Administration offices comes under the category of "Top Management" and the functions performed are varied. Long range plans programs and planning dates are formulated to insure accomplishments of the Directorate Mission.

The office determines ways and means of improving effectiveness of operation, and maintains liaison with all Air Force Maintenance activities within the SAAMA area.

One of the important phases in the Plans, Operations, and Administration Office is to analyze and compile data for preservation of production costs and overhead accounts. Charts, graphs and tables prepared by the office tell the story of production costs and how they fluctuate.

Another phase is to maintain technical surveillance of production activities and represents the Directorate on production problems in joint usage agreements and arrangements with other Services, Commands and Aircraft Manufacturers. This Office also establishes priorities on major workloads to insure complete and effective fulfillment of all Depot production objectives.

The Administration Section is responsible for the Air Force Technical Order distribution and maintains the Message Center for the entire Directorate. All travel orders, vouchers, request for travel orders are also handled by this office.

All hand tools and equipment required by personnel of the Directorate are obtained through the Property Section. In addition, this Section operated ten tool rooms advantageously located in the shops to serve the mechanics, with an average transaction of tools totaling 10,500 daily.

The Industrial Relations Section handles matters pertaining to Industrial Relations such as Blood Banks, Charity Drives, special projects and historical reports. Complete news coverage for the weekly newspaper "The Flying Time" is also maintained.

Still another function of this office is to evaluate suggestions turned in by the employees of our Directorate. These suggestions are screened for possible patents and inventive qualities. Cash awards are paid on those placed into use. No wonder then, that with so many technical minds in the Offices and Divisions, the Directorate Maintenance-Engineering is also known as "Gadgeteer's Paradise."

Antennas, 35. It is of special interest to point out that radio crystals are being reconditioned and checked at the rate of 6,100 per day.

This Branch is also engaged in the maintenance of all types of Ground Electronic Equipment within SAAMA. This equipment includes direction finders, recorder-reproduction units, storm detecting sets, air to ground contact units, over 70 different types of identification sets, jamming units plus numerous types of confidential equipment.

The Section is likewise responsible for contacting, greeting and escorting visitors to the Directorate and conducting tours throughout the Industrial areas. This Section also coordinates all training of civilian and military personnel, and sets up courses of on-the-job training not only for the SAAMA personnel, but personnel of other Air Materiel Areas the world over.

As in any large industry, the Assistant for Quality Office is accountable for the quality of products turned out by the various production Branches. This function is performed throughout the medium of Production Inspection and Quality Analysis. Production Inspection personnel control the quality of all SAAMA products by sampling inprocess and acceptance inspections. Quality Analysis takes date furnished by Inspection personnel and assembles this date for use in correcting trouble areas. Forty-one sampling stations check over 1,000 items each day. Over 600 precision tools and test equipment are checked daily. Analysis personnel conduct intensive research in techniques and methods for the repair of items in the numerous shops within the Directorate; 694 Quality Control Charts posted throughout the shops tell at a glance the quality of work being performed within the Directorate.

The Assistant for Field Services takes action in items reported faulty in performance, discepancy in operation, defective in materials or imperfect in workmanship. Then again it may be a report on unsound methods, of performing certain jobs or a negligent handling of materiels.

All U.R.'s of which this office receives over 250 daily, are carefully investigated and recommendation for improvements, be it to the various Divisions, A.F. Bases or the manufacturer are made. An average of 60 investigations per day are completed.

The last but not least within the Directorate is the Assistant for Depot Maintenance. The talents of the personnel and facilities of this office are well fitted to the Directorate's demand for mass production techniques, designs of new equipment and experimental work.

For example, one of the Sections within this office designs various items of equipment for use in the Directorate or other activities at Kelly AFB. An average of 25 projects are in work at all times. Approximately 50 are successfully completed each month. This Section also constructs full scale models of equipment of intricate design to prove the soundness of design. Many new various techniques in the overhaul or repair of products within the Directorate are developed and investigated. The chemical and physical laboratory makes analysis and tests on metals, fuels, oils, cleaning solutions, varnishes, rubber, etc., at the rate of 200 per month. The laboratory also conducts radio graphic inspections of B-36 propeller blades, castings, etc., for metalurgical defects.

Another Unit of this office reviews bidder's proposals, requests for shop equipment, etc. It also interviews various factory representatives and takes physical inventory of equipment in use within the Directorate.

Drafting and reproducing is also accomplished by this Office. This year to date, the total drawing units numbered 11,555. Reproductions ranging from blue prints to microfilm prints totaled 902,064 units.

Engineering plans and the installation of electronic and telephone facilities at 35 Air Force Bases within SAAMA area are handled These functions involve the implementation of 442 projects with monetary value running into millions of dollars.

Another Section is processing or monitoring new construction projects, Air Installation and shop maintenance work requests. These numbered over 700 to date this year.
